I was very honored to receive the news that the Academy of Underwater Arts and Sciences has awarded me the 2017 NOGI Award for Arts. We will be heading back to the East Coast to attend the award ceremonies in early November. I was not only honored to receive this news, but when I contemplated the long list of very dedicated and talented underwater photographers that were past honorees, well, I was very humbled as well.

“What we view from the surface, though, is only a reflection off the silvery ocean membrane — a mirrored image of our Earth’s sky and atmosphere — which reveals little about itself until we dive deeper within it. What we discover underwater is a vibrant diversity of biology, bedrock, and physical oceanography.”
