The Georgia O'Keeffe Museum Hosts Photographer Jo Whaley

"Jo Whaley was given the extreme honor of exhibiting her photography alongside O'Keeffe's paintings, at the Georgia O'Keeffe museum this winter. Echos, featuring Whaley's work is on display through February 24, 2019. Whaley has always been a favorite among photo-eye represented artists for her unique ability to stage an image that seems rather impossible to execute. I've asked Jo to talk about her process, what it means to be paired up with such a woman of high esteem like Georgia O'Keeffe, and what she is dreaming up next!" — Juliane Worthington, Gallery Associate

Whaley in LensWork Extended #88 The Theater of Insects

Jo Whaley's studio still life photographs bring us images that harken back to the days when insect collections were a form of entertainment as well as a way of exploring the world. She creates these detailed constructions in order to photograph them.
