Knapp in LensWork Extended #125 Infrared Trees

"One of the great joys of photography is standing near and looking closely at what you love. I love the drama created when these trees – these beloved objects – are backlit by the sun. I treasure the way sunlight creates stars when it bursts its way through the small openings between branches and leaves. I'm especially fond of the effect I've seen when newly-born translucent leaves glow, as if they themselves are emitting the light."
